JOHNNY APPLESEED: Redefining Queer Indigenous Pedagogy

Hosted by the Office of Indigenous Education & SOGI UBC

Monday
SEPTEMBER 23
STY-WET-TAN Great Hall (1985 West Mall)
11:30-1:00pm

Join us for an educational and thought-provoking conversation with Joshua Whitehead. Light refreshments will be provided.

Joshua Whitehead is an Oji-Cree, Two-Spirit storyteller and academic from Peguis First Nation on Treaty 1 territory in Manitoba. He is currently working toward a Ph.D. in Indigenous literatures and cultures at the University of Calgary on Treaty 7 territory.

His debut novel, Jonny Appleseed, was published by Arsenal Pulp Press in 2018. In the same year, he was named a finalist for the Dayne Ogilvie Prize for Canadian LGBTQ writers, and the book was named as a longlisted nominee for the 2018 Scotiabank Giller Prize and a shortlisted finalist for the Governor General’s Award for English-language fiction at the 2018 Governor General’s Awards and the 2019 Amazon.ca First Novel Award.
